InCoB is the official conference of APBioNet (<http://incob.apbionet.org/>), an international non-profit, non-governmental, international organization based in Singapore that endeavours the promotion of bioinformatics in the Asia Pacific Region. Previous events were held in Bangkok, Penang, Auckland, Pusan, Delhi, Hong Kong, Taipei and Singapore. From its humble beginnings in Bangkok, InCoB has grown since 2002 to become one of the largest Bioinformatics conferences in the Asia-Pacific region. InCoB 2009 (Singapore) drew more than 440 participants from 19 countries. Participants have usually biology and/or computing backgrounds.

InCoB2010 in Tokyo will showcase latest research findings and technologies in all areas of bioinformatics and expanding for the first time into other areas such as bioinformatic-related cloud computing and networking, biocomputin, bioinformatic business, environmental genomics (white bio), synthetic genomes, metagenomics, immunomics and personalized medicine.

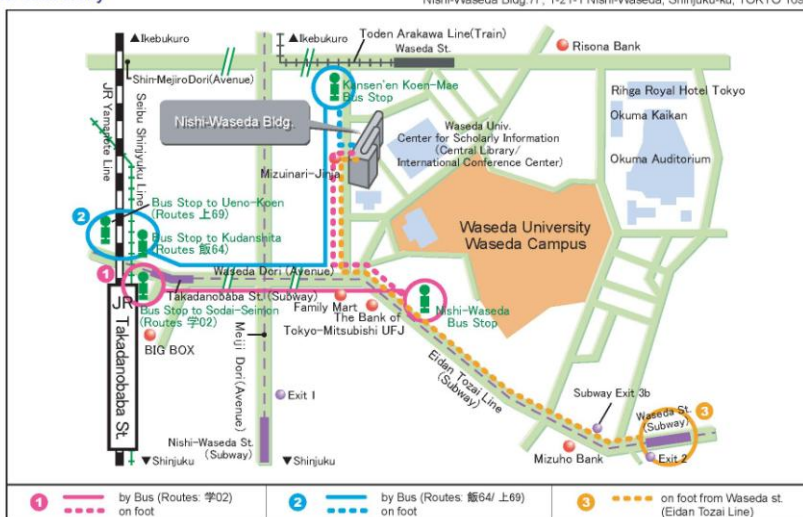

Distinguished speakers delivering Keynotes include Hiroaki Kitano (SONY CSL) and Clyde A. Hutchinson III (J. Craig Venter Institute).
